

Up on the Rooftop

Bowling Green State University Oaks Offices

What better way to describe the clever placing of marketing, accounting, kitchen staff, and facilities in one office space?

BGSU's Oaks dining hall—a LEED Gold building—utilized its 3,700 square foot second floor for all the administrative tasks just inside the lush rooftop garden. Nvironment was commissioned to chop up the space with a little interior design spice and make the flavored band of employees fit. An open floor plan was the perfect note to this ensemble and worked especially well with the daylighting from the bank of windows across the office.

Bright, vibrant colors punctuate the Oaks Offices, popping off the black and white foundation elements and infusing the environment with even more sense of openness. Add to this the conference room mezzanine overlooking the dining hall, and this motley mix of admins have the perfect space to really get things cooking.
